

Xianglong Li (b. 1995, Huangshi, China; lives and works in Brooklyn, New York) is a painter whose practice reimagines internet culture and pop imagery on canvas. He earned his BFA from the China Central Academy of Fine Arts and his MFA from the School of Visual Arts.

Li approaches memes and digital symbols as material for painting, slowing their fleeting speed and transforming them into spaces of contradiction, distortion, and reflection. Humor plays a central role in his work, not as mere punchline but as a way to reveal the tensions of cultural dislocation, mistranslation, and youth performance. Through playful yet unsettling images, his paintings expose the absurd logic beneath shared culture while offering new modes of observation and thought.
